

Discussion Items

- When trapped in disorder, how do you find some underlying order?
Looking for best practices. (4 votes)

- when you find yourself someplace chaotic with your team, how do you inspire them to see parts differently? are there ways that you have found to support each other in the chaos? (4 votes)

- There's someone I work with who is always the loudest and always dictates what we do. Am I in an authoritarian chaos? (3 votes)

pŷ - I d like to discuss a way to integrate program technical creativity work... these should not compete but support each other... believe in my experience the intersection has definitely been chaotic zone. (2 votes)

- How do we identify and communicate Obvious domains to our teams, and convince them to take the time/agree to formalize a process/best practice? (1 votes)

Current Being Discussed

Done Discussing

- Does our education system - especially engineering and science and math programs promote only ordered problem solving? Does that have an impact on workforce transitions? (8 votes)

- Does the way government contracts are written force us into a particular zone, either appropriately or inappropriately? (7 votes)

- Ways to change culture to recognize some disruption and disorder is good for sparking innovation/creativity. (6 votes)